

SHELDON J. HARRIS

Mr. Harris is experienced in all aspects of the legislative and public policy process including developing and executing legislative strategies and tactics. He also attends to policy aspects of regulatory and administrative issues before departments and agencies of the federal government.

Before starting his own firm, Mr. Harris has been a partner with three major law firms, and served on the Committee on Rules, U.S. House of Representatives as a member of the professional staff and as acting staff director.

The confluence of government policy and real life repercussions of such policies has been a mainstay of Mr. Harris' interest and practice while working for both Congress and in private practice. He has argued those themes in major policy arenas. In those experiences, Mr. Harris has worked with the most junior staff of Congress to the elected leadership of the House and Senate, Secretaries of departments of the U.S. government and directors of international bodies.
