Advisory Board

Allan Borut founded APB Enterprises, Inc. a development consulting firm to provide assistance to state and local governments, non-profit organizations, private developers and restaurant companies. His specialty is identifying new partnership opportunities that further the organizational goals of public and private entities.

For government entities and non-profits, Allan has created affordable housing and economic development strategies to expand the number of local participants by identifying the social and economic benefits of cooperative endeavors. He has worked in dozens of cities, large and small, across the United States helping to rethink approaches to housing and economic development and create new coalitions of public institutions and private organizations. He is highly effective at helping organizations form partnerships by identifying and building on individual partner strengths while recognizing and mitigating their perceived risks.

Working with private developers and property owners Allan developed strategies to organize, plan and implement new properties and the re-use of existing properties. For restaurant companies, Allan provided leasing and management assistance. He has provided long-range and strategic planning assistance to small businesses and non-profits.

Allan is an active member on non-profit boards. For Oceanites, he provided leadership in the strategic planning process recently concluded. He is currently Treasurer for Dumbarton Concert/Inner City-Inner Child, a cultural and educational institution in Washington, DC, that is celebrating its 40th anniversary.

Prior to establishing APB Enterprises, Inc., Allan worked at The Urban Land Institute (in Washington, DC) and as an associate at Simon Enterprises (in New York City) where he helped plan and was responsible for the implementation of a 280-acre land development project in Westchester County.

Allan was born in New York City, attended Oberlin College as an undergraduate and earned an MBA from the University of Rochester. He lives in Washington, DC.
